Subject: Re: Congratulations...

Hi Joe -- I know I owe you about 10 e-mails, but the last two weeks have been insane, as you can imagine. Knowing that Phil would soon be gone, Kevin and I started having rather long daily meetings with Phil on about March 10. Then, Kevin and I found out about the "staff changes" on Tuesday, the 18th. Then, we spent four VERY INTENSE (and long) days with Phil leading up to his last day. Phewf! Then, I moved into Mary's old office yesterday (which I think is the most exciting part of this whole thing -- WINDOWS!) and now it is now. So you'll have to come visit. Actually -- you will have to come visit. In conversations this week with David, we were talking about the need for people to do FBI work. He suggested that, as we have discrete projects that someone like JOE FREEMAN could do really quickly and efficiently, David would be overjoyed to bring you here for a week or two to do them. At this point, I have a bunch of those projects, so if you're interested? and if Carolyn could spare you? Just call whenever you want to work! Thanks for offering to interview the potential intern in Tuscon, but she took a paying job! Can you believe it? Working for money instead of serving the public for free. Appalling. Thanks, also, for the funny Anne Rice article. She is an unusual woman, and I enjoyed the article, but I hope that my enjoyment of this one book doesn't qualify me as a follower! My only advice on shin splints is to try some different shoes. Long, long ago, I had a pair of Brooks (horror!) that I believe caused shin splints. To cure the pain, I purchased a pair of Saucony Shadows and I have been a faithful Saucony customer ever since. Not that Sauconys will cure your shins, but maybe the right shoe would. Otherwise, I have no idea. Stretch? (I have never tried this tactic, so I can't vouch for it.) Thanks for the e-mails. Write soon and keep things in perspective for me. Although the new office is cool, the duties seem enormous right now. Hope you're doing ok in Phoenix. Hi to Carolyn and the cats!
