Subject: Re: Veciana

1. Talk to Gordon Winslow (we may have done this already, but nothing ever makes its way down the pipeline, so I have no idea if we have.).2. Would the US Coast Guard office in Miami have any records from that time relating to anti-Castro groups and missions, and boats that they "didn't see" leaving in the direction of Cuba? How about Customs?3. Is Cesar Diosdato still living in the Miami area?4. Speaking of things never making it down the pipeline, what "new angle?"5. Does Gaeton Fonzi know of any other former anti-Castroites that we should speak to?6. Manuel, Christopher and Joe could spend a great deal of time researching the clubs of SoBe and the beaches of Miami for clues. I expect that a number of young women on the beach ought to be questioned as to their whereabouts on November 22, 1963. (okay, how about November 22, 1993?)Manuel, could you and I speak about Cuba when you get the chance? I have a few things I'd like to discuss with you off-record.To: Tom Samoluk/ARRBcc: Dave Montague/ARRB, Christopher Barger/ARRB, Joseph Masih/ARRBFrom: Manuel Legaspi/ARRBDate: 04/28/97 02:56:43 PMSubject: Re: VecianaHere are some of the things that might be accomplished by a trip to Miami:(Dave, Joe, Christopher, please add to this list if you have issues you want addressed)1. Reviewing the D.R.E. records at the University of Miami for possible leads for additional documents.2. Talking to Manuel Salvat to see if he has other records he might be willing to donate, either to us or to the U of Miami.3. Contacting the current Alpha-66 organization for possible records they might have, with a particular focus on the time period surrounding the JFK assassination and the Castro assassination plots.4. Asking the University of Miami for records related to the use of campus land by the CIA under a commercial cover (the JMWAVE station was located on University property under the name of Zenith Technical Enterprises).5. Talking to Veciana, both about the $$ issue and about the new angle we discussed last week.6. Talking to Carlos Bringuier (he lives in Miami). David Montague, Joe Masih and I are going to try to call him tomorrow and ask him about the Oswald USMC manual, otherwise, he might have some records related to the New Orleans delegation of the DRE in his current possession. If he is cooperative, perhaps a trip to Miami might be more productive...
