Subject:	Re: More stupid questions
Body:	Tab is what you're supposed to use on paragraphs. On block quotes, you should use double indent (Ctrl+Shift+F7), which indents on both the left and the right. Either your indent icon was doing a double indent, or it was a hard tab, which indents the entire paragraph along the left margin.As far as 1st page suppress goes, I believe that refers to the fact that page numbers shouldn't appear on the first page of a chapter. I set up the template to do it this way, but let me know if something goes awry. Also, if worse comes to worse, you can always just email the file to me and tell me what needs to be reformatted...To:Petercc: From:Joseph Freeman/ARRB Date:07/06/98 05:23:11 PMSubject:More stupid questionsYou're sure to think I'm a moron before this is through, but if I read Jeremy's style manual correctly, I am to indent paragraphs, so I've just been using tab to indent them, 'cause my indent icon indents the whole paragraph. Is this OK or am I going to screw up the entire system somehow? Secondly, the style manual also references "first-page suppress for chapters". I have no idea what this means; am I supposed to be doing something, or does this suppression thing just happen on its own?
