MEMORANDUM TO THE PRESIDENT

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is contesting all but one of the first set of decisions regarding its records made by the Assassination Records Review Board. See FBI Appeal to the President, August 8, 1995. In asking the President to continue to postpone the release of information in records related to the assassination of President Kennedy, the FBI's relies solely on generalized arguments and statements of Bureau policy. These general arguments do not satisfy the FBI's obligation under the President John F. Kennedy Assassination Records Collection Act (JFK Act) as adopted by Congress and signed into law by President Bush in 1992.

In failing to offer the particularized evidence required by the JFK Act, the FBI is effectively retreating from a promise made by its own Director to Congress in 1992. In testimony to Congress, Director Sessions assured the Members that the FBI stood ready to satisfy its burden to provide particularized evidence to the Review Board:

"I would stand on the general proposition that has been expressed so openly here this morning that we in the FBI should be prepared with particularity to defend a particular piece of information and the necessity of it not being divulged."¹

As will be shown below, the FBI's August 8 appeal not only makes no attempt to satisfy its prior pledge to Congress, its arguments here are inconsistent with its own prior releases of information. This memorandum will examine the FBI's appeal in three sections: Part I will address the basic statutory requirements of the JFK Act; Part II will address the issue of informants; and Part III will address the "foreign relations" issue.

¹Hearing Before the Senate Comm. on Governmental Affairs on S.J. Res. 282 to Provide For the Expeditious Disclosure of Records Relevant to the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy, 102d Cong., 2d Sess., pp. 64, 66 (1992) (statement of the Hon. William S. Sessions) (emphasis added).

We trust that, after considering the applicable provisions of the JFK Act, the information that the FBI wishes to keep secret, and the absence of "clear and convincing evidence" in support of continued secrecy, the President will agree with the Review Board's decision that the law requires full and immediate release of these records.

PART I: THE STATUTORY PRESUMPTION OF DISCLOSURE OF ASSASSINATION RECORDS

The Bureau's letter and memorandum fail to cite the most pertinent sections of the JFK Act: the standard for release of information. According to the statute, "all Government records concerning the assassination of President John F. Kennedy should carry a presumption of immediate disclosure."

Section 2(a)(2) (emphasis added). The statute further declares that "only in the rarest cases is there any legitimate need for continued protection of such records." Section 2(a)(7) (emphasis added).

The FBI's memorandum not only fails to cite the controlling language of the statute, it fails to address the issue raised by the statute. Indeed, nowhere in the FBI's submission is there any discussion of why the records at issue here are among "the rarest of cases" or why they differ in any way from the thousands of other records for which the Bureau also has redacted information.

In addition to ignoring the statutory presumption favoring disclosure of records in all but the rarest of cases, the FBI also neglects to discuss the evidentiary standard imposed by the JFK Act on agencies seeking to withhold information from the public. For each recommended postponement, an agency is required to submit "clear and convincing evidence"² that one of the specified grounds for postponement is present. Id., Sections 6, 9(c)(1).³

Since then, the FBI has had three years to identify -- and marshal evidence regarding -- those few instances where it may still be necessary to withhold from the American public information relating to ²Congress "carefully selected" this standard because "less exacting standards, such as substantial evidence or a preponderance of the evidence, were not consistent with the legislation's stated goal" of prompt, full release. H.R. Rep. No. 625, Pt. 1, 102d Cong., 2d Sess., p. 25 (1992).

³The Bureau recognizes in passing, and only in relation to the "foreign relations" issue, that the "clear and convincing" standard applies. See FBI Memorandum at 4. Significantly, there is no discussion of the clear and convincing standard with respect to the informant issue. [correct?].

the assassination of their President.

It is useful to divide the assassination records now at issue into two groups: those in which the FBI claims continued secrecy is necessary to protect confidential relationships with informants, and those in which it claims continued secrecy is necessary to protect a "confidential" liaison relationship with a foreign government. As demonstrated below with regard to each group, the FBI's assertions cannot withstand scrutiny.

PART II: THE FBI's INFORMANT POSTPONEMENTS

Although informant issues are raised in only four of the nine documents now in question, the informant issue is, with respect to the total volume of FBI assassination records, the most recurring issue. Accordingly, we will address informants first.

Two provisions of the JFK Act -- Sections 6(2) and 6(4) -- set forth the requirements for postponing confidential informant material.

A. Section 6(2)

Section 6(2) permits postponement only if there is "clear and convincing evidence" that "public disclosure":

- (1) "would reveal the name or identity of a living person who provided confidential information;" and
- (2) "would pose a substantial risk of harm to that person" (emphasis added).

The FBI has not provided any evidence that the persons in question, each of whom gave information over thirty years ago, are still alive, let alone at "substantial risk of harm" -- conceding, in effect, that Section 6(2) cannot be satisfied. Accordingly, the Review Board rejected Section 6(2) as a basis for these postponements.

B. Section 6(4)

Section 6(4) requires "clear and convincing evidence" that:

- (1) "public disclosure would compromise the existence of an understanding of confidentiality . . . between a Government agent and a cooperating individual or a foreign government";
- (2) the understanding of confidentiality "currently requir[es] protection"; and
- (3) "public disclosure would be so harmful that it outweighs the public interest" in disclosure.

(emphasis added). Each of these three requirements is briefly discussed below.

Compromising Confidentiality: For purposes of the postponements now at issue, the Review Board accepts that the use of informant symbol numbers or the existence of an informant file provides evidence that the informant in question was assured some measure of confidentiality. It does not follow, however, that this confidentiality is, or ever has been, absolute. Indeed, as a matter of historical record, the FBI has been prepared to expose an informant where doing so furthered its own law-enforcement,⁴ or even political,⁵ objectives. Nor does it follow that release of an informant

⁴For example, the FBI's Manual of Instructions admonished FBI agents that they

"must condition the informant to the fact that someday the knowledge he possesses may be needed as evidence in court to assist the Government Psychologically prepare the informant for the fact that he may at some future date be called upon to render a still further contribution to his Government by testifying to the information he has furnished Proper indoctrination of the informant is essential as the Bureau must provide witnesses whenever the Department of Justice initiates prosecutions in security cases."

Manual of Instructions, Section 107, "Security Informants and Confidential Sources," p. 10 (issued symbol number or file number, as opposed to the informant's true name, necessarily will compromise confidentiality.

"Currently Requiring Protection": The legislative history of the JFK Act reinforces the very requirement that the FBI would disregard: Only those understandings of confidentiality that currently require protection should receive protection under Section 6(4).

The House Committee on Government Operations concluded in its Report on a predecessor bill (H.J. Res. 454):

"There is no justification for perpetual secrecy for any class of records.
Nor can the withholding of any individual record be justified on the basis of general confidentiality concerns applicable to an entire class. Every record must be judged on its own merits, and every record will ultimately be made available for public disclosure."

H.R. Rep. No. 625, Pt. 1, 102d Cong., 2d Sess., p. 16 (1992) (emphasis added).

The FBI presented to the Committee the same arguments regarding chilling the cooperation of existing informants or impeding recruitment of new ones that the FBI has repeated to the Review Board and now to the Chief Executive. The Committee responded that it

"recognize[d] that law enforcement agencies must to some degree rely on confidential sources However, the Committee specifically rejects the proposition that such confidentiality exists in perpetuity. As with all other government information, the government's legitimate interest in keeping such information confidential diminishes with the passage of time."

Id., p. 30 (emphasis added).⁶

The Committee also specifically rejected "claims that known informants or deceased informants should be protected." Id.⁷ Indeed, in testimony before another House Committee, the FBI conceded that H.J. Res. 454 would not permit the categorical protection of dead informants:

"[A]s I read the current resolution [H.J. Res. 454⁸], there would be other judgments used as to the disclosure of confidential informants.

For example, if the informant was now dead, that information would be released [under H.J. Res. 454]. We would not release that under the prior or current processing procedures [under the Freedom of Information Act]."

⁶See also S. Rep. 102-328, 102d Cong., 2d Sess. (1992), pp. 28-29 (requiring the Review Board to consider "the exact restrictions regarding the scope and duration of confidentiality" and "whether the agreement [of confidentiality] currently requires protection" -- despite the Government's argument "that all such confidentiality requires withholding to preserve the integrity [of] the promise of confidentiality") (emphasis added).

⁷See also S. Rep. 102-328, 102d Cong., 2d Sess. (1992), p. 29 (in deciding on postponements, the Review Board among other factors "should consider . . . whether a witness or informant or confidential source is deceased").

⁸The JFK Act as passed is more disclosure-oriented on this issue than the version of H.J. Res. 454 on which the FBI was then commenting. That version of H.J. Res. 454 would have permitted postponement to avoid "a substantial and unjustified violation of confidentiality between a Government agent and a witness or a foreign government," without any balancing against the compelling public interest in immediate disclosure. See Hearing Before the Subcommittee on Economic and Commercial Law, House Committee on the Judiciary, p. 14 (May 20, 1992).

Testimony of Floyd I. Clarke, Deputy Director, FBI Hearing Before the Subcommittee on Economic and Commercial Law, House Committee on the Judiciary, p. 130 (May 20, 1992).

Harm Weighed Against Public Interest: The JFK Act defines the "public interest" as the "interest in prompt public disclosure of assassination records for historical and governmental purposes and for the purpose of fully informing the American people about the history surrounding the assassination." Section 3(10) (emphasis added). The statute specifies that this public interest in prompt disclosure is "compelling." Id. (emphasis added).

Nor would it have been unduly taxing for the FBI to have given the Review Board at least some information about these informants. Because these informants were assigned symbol numbers, both the FBI's Headquarters and the responsible field office would have had a file for each individual informant, readily retrievable by the corresponding symbol number appearing in the assassination records. At a minimum, these files would reflect true names and last known residences, the years in which the FBI used them as informants, and their (at least approximate) ages if they were still alive. But the FBI did not bother even to provide such rudimentary information from its own Headquarters files in support of these postponements. In a real sense, the FBI has not even tried to meet its evidentiary burden under the JFK Act.

PART III: THE FBI's "FOREIGN RELATIONS" POSTPONEMENTS

For its postponements in the remaining five documents, the FBI relies on Sections 6(4) and 6(1)(B).

The discussion of Section 6(4) set out above applies equally to "an understanding of confidentiality" with "a foreign government" as to one with a "cooperating individual": for a postponement to be sustained, there must be "clear and convincing evidence" that:

- (1) public disclosure would compromise the existence of an understanding of confidentiality;
- (2) the understanding of confidentiality currently requires protection; and
- (3) disclosure would be so harmful that it outweighs the public interest in disclosure.

The postponement standards under Section 6(1)(B) are similarly stringent. There must be "clear and convincing evidence" that:

- (1) "the threat to the military defense, intelligence operations, or conduct of foreign relations of the United States is of such gravity that it outweighs the public interest in disclosure;"
- (2) "disclosure would reveal an intelligence source or method which is currently utilized, or reasonably expected to be utilized, by the United States Government;"
- (3) the source or method in question "has not been officially disclosed"; and
- (4) disclosure of the source or method "would interfere with the conduct of intelligence activities."
