MEMORAN DUM

Elliott:

I am sending along to you two printed copies of an e-mail I received yesterday from Bill Joyce, one of our Board members. Ideally, I would send it to you on disk, but we have not been able to convert it from e-mail into WordPerfect, so the double-spaced copies are all we have for now.

As you may know, the Board members are engaged in a collaborative effort to write one "chapter" of the Final Report.

This copy is Bill's third draft and he asked me to send it to you for your comments. Perhaps you could comment on the paper for this one chapter and edit the other chapters on computer as you and I discussed last night.

When you read the Board's chapter, you will immediately notice that it is different in tone than the remainder of the Report. I talked to Bill yesterday about calling the Board's chapter either an "Introduction" or an "Epilogue" to the Report. He wasn't crazy about the Epilogue idea, but he said he would think about the differences and talk to the other Board members. I tell you this so that you won't think I'm crazy if I say to edit the Board's chapter, but leave it in the first person. We will continue to use the third person in the remainder of the Report.

If you have any thoughts or comments, give me a call. I will be sending more of the Report to you tomorrow.

Thanks again,
