REFERENCE: Memo of 24 June

1. [redacted] All out of line in asking you to perform these services for him. He is probably doing so because he can't get the attention he thinks he deserves from the [redacted]. We have discussed your memo with [redacted] and [redacted]. The answer to the points you raise is as follows:

a. If [redacted] wants and needs this report, he must get it direct from the [redacted]. The [redacted] says, incidentally, that if he wanted it he could have picked it up when he was down here a month ago, but that we do not need to involve ourselves in getting it to him.

b. CIA need have nothing to do with bringing [redacted] into the project. [redacted] will have to handle that directly with [redacted].

c. [redacted] has bowed out of the picture completely. He has done nothing further on the subject of Federal prisoners and does not know if [redacted] has. [redacted] will have to take this up with the [redacted] which, for your information, has done nothing either.

d. We have told [redacted] that we plan no further action on your memo, short of informing [redacted] that we have discussed your points with the [redacted] and that he can shortly expect that [redacted] will communicate with him to find out what he needs.

In your dealings with [redacted], please try to get it through his head that the Agency is not a messenger service or a trouble shooter and that his principals in Washington are in the [redacted] office and it is to them he must look for help. The method of getting this idea into his head, we leave to your usual good judgment.

SUBJECT: [redacted]

1. We furnished [redacted] with the substance of [redacted] If any problem arises in connection with his trip he will take them up with the [redacted] He plans to see him when he gets back for anything he may have picked up not related to the [redacted]'s interests.

2. In the absence of any instructions to the contrary [redacted] requested our assistance with the following three problems:

a. In 1951 he submitted a Progress Report covering his work on macro-analysis. All copies of this report, which is classified "TOP SECRET", are in the custody of the [redacted] probably either [redacted] or [redacted]. A copy of this report is needed in connection with his present work and he asks that if possible it be made available to him in the near future. He brings a copy with him.

b. He requests permission to enlist the assistance of [redacted] and a staff member at the [redacted] He believes that [redacted] has a "Q" clearance. It is [redacted]'s idea to use him on certain of the scientific aspects of the project, but since [redacted] is on paid leave from [redacted] we will have to [redacted] on the background.

c. On 3 March 1952 [redacted] was visited by [redacted] (CIA) and two others. This meeting included a discussion of possible future experimental subjects and [redacted] volunteered to investigate the possibility of using volunteers from Federal prisons. Work has progressed to a point where the use of such subjects is necessary and [redacted] wants to know whether or not [redacted] was successful.

Since [redacted] will be leaving on 1 August, he would appreciate early action on these matters.
