in maximum custody over a period of time or of developing a drug which would not cause permanent harm to the taker for the purpose of arriving at the same end result, i.e. a secure situation for extremely sensitive defectors. It might well be that defectors could be afforded their choice of being held in maximum custody for the period of reorientation or to take the drug with the guarantee that they will be completely normal within the 18 month period.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. It is recommended that [redacted] to determine whether or not the development of such a drug is both feasible and desirable.
