PHENOMENA BECOME EXPLAINABLE

Korney Arsen'yev, Engineer

Long ago we received reports about an unusual phenomenon. They reported that a young woman, placing her hands on certain sections of the human body, thereby heals it from quite specific illnesses. The removal of radiculitic pains, migraines, coagulation of blood in the case of cuts - these are the simplest cases. More complex are the healing of near- or farsightedness. And there are also such facts as remote diagnosis when the healer, not seeing and hearing the patient, amazingly accurately determines not only the scope of the illnesses but also their causes.

We read the following in the newspaper, "Zarya Vostoka" from 19 Oct. 1979: "Rapid and seemingly unsystematic movements of the hands at a distance of several centimeters from the chest of an intermittently breathing sick girl produced an amazing effect. After counted minutes of this peculiar "massage" the patient's face grew rosy and the breathing became steady and free... Thus nature gave Tbilisi resident, D. Davitashvili, an amazing gift about the essence of which at present we can only guess and make suppositions. One thing is undisputed: in certain cases her hands are able to affect the human organism."

We decided to meet with Dzhusa Davitashvili.

A man is standing in front of her. She passes the left hand downward at a distance of ten-fifteen centimeters from the body, slowing down slightly in certain points. One pass, a second. And here is the diagnosis. "You have a gastric ulcer," says the healer, "and unwell kidneys."

The man is replaced by a woman. Age - 30-40 years. The same movements of the hands, the same scheme.

"You have hyperfunction of the thyroid. And from that, all the consequences. And what do the doctors say?" asks Dzhusa.

"The same diagnosis."

"This can be cured."

"With what?"

" With what? With the biofield!"

Once again the biofield. In many ways mysterious, uninvestigated, but already undisputed, recorded, "caught" in its manifestations. But what is happening in our case?

In order to answer this question we should look at how healing occurs. "What is wrong with you?" asks Dzhuna of the man who is holding his head, the paleness on his face alternates with reddish spots... a horrible headache. Dzhuna extends her left palm, she leaves the right palm to the side so that the man's head falls into the gap between the palms of the healer. One second, two seconds... "That is all," says Dzhuna. It is truly a miracle! Both the paleness and the red spots disappear, the face takes on a different expression.

"What do you feel? What did you feel? What was it like?"

There is a mass of questions. "There was a sensation," says the sufferer, "like it became very warm in my head, like a fire of some kind, and in this fire the pain literally dissolved by itself... And there was a kind of heating and it passed just like the pain."

Interesting, and do all of your patients have the same sensation?

"No," answers Dzhuna. She inquired specially and clarified with the patients what secondary phenomena accompany healing. Some feel heat, others feel cold and in the case, let us say, of illnesses which at the given moment don't bring with them any sensations of illness it is possible that nothing will be felt... And then, "who feels what" is an interesting question but it doesn't explain anything.

It is interesting to know what happens with the healer himself. What are his impressions from the process? "When I pass a hand along a certain line of the human body my fingers begin to feel different sensations. Suddenly heating begins, then a feeling of warmth, and then cold. It is possible to learn to differentiate these sensations and as a rule they indicate what is wrong with one or another organ in the investigated organism. Thus, for example, a malignant tumor brings about an extreme sensation of cold in the hand.

"Here we must introduce a concept such as energetics. In my conception the entire human organism is like a large and complex factory constantly working to produce those or other substances which it needs. And like a real factory there is an energy network passing through channels known only to electricians and in the human organism there is an energy system. It has its inputs and outputs. In working, every organ needs energy. In the same way, from the energy irregularities it is possible to determine what is wrong with one or another system in the human organism. Hence the healer's sensations of warmth and cold... Thus as soon as I find disturbances in the energy system I try to correct them. Human hands are literally electrodes which conduct energy. I apply the palm or fingertips to the skin area connected with the ailing "mechanism" and thereby restore the disturbed energy system of the organ."

"You undoubtedly know that the so-called system of active points on the human body reflects extremely clearly what is going on inside of it. Increased or decreased resistance to a weak electrical current in these points indicates the norm or disfunction. Acupuncturists know this quite well and by placing needles in the acupuncture points they act on one or another organ. The same thing happens for me. I act with my energy field on the acupuncture points sending certain potentials to them."

Can't there be mistakes? Where is the guarantee that the healer, acting in this manner, will not make the state of the patient worse instead of correcting it?

"I do not know of a single case when a healer intentionally gave someone a headache... It is not even known if it is possible to damage a healthy organ. This problem should be thoroughly investigated. In general, the following may be said. If a correct diagnosis is made (and this happens when the "indications" of the healer are compared with medical data, i.e., with the diagnosis "made" under clinical conditions) then the healer will simply not have the "latitude" of action; he will act on precisely the organ which needs the action. My relatives, acquaintances and friends turn to me; they say: help, I have a headache, I cut my hand, my stomach hurts. And I help. It does not matter that we do not know the full nature of the biofield. This is a matter of the future. But the fact remains that it is possible to diagnose and to heal. And what is most interesting, the biofield is around all living matter and that means that the ability to feel and to act upon it is inherent to every human being - if he is healthy. Almost everyone has an ear for music but it is not suitably developed in everyone. Everyone has the ability to sense biofields, it is only necessary to polish and develop it. We all unconsciously use the biofield: if we have a headache we rub our forehead; if we have a toothache we apply our palm to this area; if we bruise ourselves we rub this area lightly. We look at a person and say: you don't look well, you are sick, even though we don't perform any analysis. We come to the theater and the actor playing someone's role makes us feel his biofield; we begin to suffer, to love, to hate... Our emotions change. An angry person comes to work, sits down at a table and is silent; he doesn't say anything but we feel how our mood begins to spoil. This is also a manifestation of the biofield.

...Visiting the editors of "Tekhnika Molodezhi," Boris Aleksandrovich Ivanov, associate of a scientific-research institute in Moscow.

"What can you say about a woman, about whom I am thinking right now?" asked one of our associates.

"Do you know her well? I.e., can you confirm what I say when I begin to diagnose?"

"Yes."

And here is what we found out. Moving his hands in the air with almost the same movements as Dzhusa (only this time no living person was standing before him), Ivanov began to talk... about the person who was absent. "This is a woman, thirty years old, nervous, easily upset, much personal unpleasantness in the past year; judging from everything her personal life is not fully in order. Now I shall talk about ailments which she has suffered."

"Is everything correct?"

"Yes, everything is correct... This is astounding!"

"There is nothing astounding," and then E. A. Ivanov said almost the same thing as Dzhuna: "I simply trained myself, developed these hidden abilities. There are about ten people here who have them also but they do not work with them and do not develop them. But if they will develop them then, for example, it will be quite easy to get rid of a comrade's headache at work... We deprive ourselves of much, relating to ourselves as people who can only drink, eat, sleep, work and invent. Man is a real mine of treasures which one must learn to use. Who among you can jump higher than two meters? Probably no one. But someone among them, how should I say, most ordinary people can do this. Isn't this surprising? Many people participate in sports but there are only a few record breakers. Why. Because they are working under their ability. Only work will bring fruit and in some cases the fruits are astonishing. Remote diagnosis, through a photograph, may seem mysterious, almost miraculous. But it is nothing more than training... Of course ability plays a role; for one person it may work better, another worse. But it will work, and this is the main thing!"

Biofield. Healing. The facts are indeed astonishing. Before my eyes D. Davitashvili healed a man on whose leg there was a nonhealing trophic ulcer. The bandages were removed. There was a black circle on the leg in the center of which was a depression, slightly moist. "I will now make several movements, the wound will dry and then blood will ooze through the dry scab and then everything will tighten," declared Dzhuna. She begins to move the fingers of her left hand on the leg around the black spot. Everything happens like she said. The wound dried up. A dry scab. Very small drops of blood came through. "That is all," says the healer. "Nothing else is necessary today... I think that one more session will be necessary, after which it will be possible to say that healing has occurred..."

Let us try to explain all of this. Undoubtedly this occasion may bring about a mass of discussions - scientific, parascientific, literate, illiterate... whatever. Before moving toward any more or less (as seems to us) clear interpretation, let us recall what we know about the biofield.

It is recorded using the Kirlian effect. A copper wire bent in the shape of the letter L, clasped in the hand reacts to the biofield, rotating along its force lines. This effect has been checked repeatedly and it is easy to duplicate. There are various sensors which are able to record some manifestations of the biofield and to convert them into electrical signals which are easy to record with any automatic recorder. There are biocurrents. Therefore it is easy to suppose that a certain electrical component of the biological field acts on the acupuncture points approximately the same way that this occurs during electropuncture. We can consider that we are dealing with static electricity coming from the hands of the healer and exciting an active point. In other words, contact diagnosis and contact healing is quite possible. But what about "telediagnosis." After all, experiments persistently confirm its existence. Diagnosis is made of a person tens of kilometers away, whom the healer has never seen...

Let us try to discuss this. And here is how. But you, dear reader, have seen neither Dzuna nor B. A. Ivanova, but at this moment you already know something about them. Associating with one another we "photograph" the biofield of everyone, we may call up in our imagination the personality of a different person whom we have seen only once. The healer or person with extrasensory ability apparently is able to differentiate the biofield. What is the difference whether he sees the person with his own eyes or senses his biofield through an intermediary?

True, here the question arises of how this occurs. Isn't it necessary to set up a number of experiments in which, using a system of sensors which clearly record the biofield, it would be possible to monitor the action of the diagnostician on "instruments?" Some experiments of this type have already been performed. The instrument measured the conductivity of active points on the patient then the healer "laid on hands" and new measurements were made.

And how did it turn out? The conductivity changed in spite of the fact that the healer was a considerable distance away and the connection with the subject was by telephone...

It seems to us that the present-day experiments are only the beginning of extensive activity in this direction. After all, what will become the object of the fixed attention of science in the near future if not man? We will not be surprised by radio receivers the size of a matchhead and holographic television. We will be surprised by new, still unclear discoveries in the area of biofields which will lead to the disclosure of astounding new possibilities of man. After all, science will not stop with the present-day knowledge.
