The Kennedys came for an evening

For some time after the deaths of John and Robert Kennedy, family patriarch Mrs. Rose Kennedy worried very much to see her young grandchildren reach the nation's highest office in order to carry on the unfinished work of their father. For a while, Rose urged him in this direction, though his wife Joan was horrified. But as time passed, even Rose became fearful for Teddy and when she was made aware that he received more threatening mail than anyone in Congress, Rose decided she did not want him to run.

FRAMINGHAM — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy yesterday described Rep. Robert F. Drinan, (D-Mass.) as "perhaps the finest and most effective first-term Congressman in the House of Representatives." Kennedy campaigned with Drinan in the 4th Congressional District, where Drinan — a Jesuit priest — is seeking a second term. He described as Drinan's "most impressive accomplishment" his success in convincing House Democrats last year to force the Foreign Affairs Committee to report out anti-war legislation.

There is more to that Edward Kennedy-Kevin White competition than meets the eye. They are of an age. White is 44, Kennedy is 42. When Kennedy the brother of the President, was moving to Washington as United States senator, White was stewing in the office of the Secretary of State wondering how he could get by the heavy hitters of the Democratic party in the state—men like Francis Bellotti, Endicott Peabody, John Collins—and run for governor or mayor of Boston.

White is a totally political man. He grew up on the politics of Charlestown and West Roxbury. His father was a member of the Boston School Committee and his mother came from a family deeply involved with who was elected to what office from Charlestown.

The Kennedys went to Harvard. White went to Williams. White had a taste of being something better than a state representative from West Roxbury. But along the way he kept bumping into that Kennedy machine.

According to Thomas Jefferson's "Manual of Parliamentary Practice and Rules of the House of Representatives," an impeachment is unlike any other legislative process. Bills in Congress die with the end of the two-year sitting, but impeachment does not.

As Jefferson noted in his guide to the House, "An impeachment is not discontinued by the dissolureconvened in November, the House drafted the articles of impeachment and the Senate picked up the process from there. It wasn't until January, 1799, that the Senate determined it had no jurisdiction to try Blount since he had resigned from the Senate and was no longer a civil officer subject to impeachment. The interruption was between the first and second session of the same

When the 8th Congress convened for its first session on Oct. 17, 1803, the proceedings against Pickens continued without a lost step with the appointment of a committee to draft the articles of impeachment.

During the impeachment of Supreme Court Justice Samuel Chase in 1804, an eight-month congressional recess intervened between

O'Neill says Nixon obstructed justice

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Majority Leader Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill (D-Mass.) said yesterday that portions of the edited White House transcripts which he has read have convinced him that President Nixon was guilty of obstructing justice in his attempts to thwart a 1972 investigation by the House Banking Committee into campaign irregularities.

But O'Neill declined to say whether he thought the President's citizens at some of the revelations made by the transcripts, he added.

In outlining the projected schedule for the House proceedings, O'Neill said a vote on impeachment would occur about August 1, regardless of whether the Judiciary Committee votes for or against impeachment.

O'Neill predicted it would take six weeks for the Judiciary Committee to complete the public hearings expected to begin next week. After that he said, it would take the com-impeachment bill probably would be sent to the House floor either immediately before or after the July 4 holidays and that the debate would begin in the "third or fourth week in July." There would be no limit on debate.

O'Neill said he expected the debate to last about two weeks, after which Judiciary Chairman Peter Rodino (D-N.J.), would offer a motion to shut off any further debate within 48 hours. At the expiration of

Nixon pays most of his back taxes

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has paid "most" of the $467,-

The officials would not state pre-

How the President and Mrs.
Nixon raised the first installment on the back assessment was not re-
